Directions:

The Mind, Culture, and Society Track is especially appropriate for students interested in social psychology, cultural psychology, education, media, business or law. Students must receive approval to complete the track, which will be confirmed after submitting this form.

Use the reverse side of this form to map out a plan for fulfilling the psychology track requirements, which are listed below. For additional information, see the track requirements form found in the student services office and posted on the department website. Because this is a tentative plan, students may need to make periodic adjustments in order to fulfill requirements.

After the track advisor reviews and approves your courses, transcript, and statement of purpose, you can declare the track on Axess. Once you have completed the form, bring it to the Student Services Office located in room 100.
