

Research Assistant Positions at Stanford Social Concepts Lab

Why do people enter interracial relationships?

Lab: Social Concepts Lab

Program: Stanford University, Department of Psychology

Supervising Researcher: Sakaria “Sai” Auelua-Toomey (PhD Student of Psychology), Dr. Steven O. Roberts (Assistant Professor of Psychology), Carmelle Bareket-Shavit (Lab Manager)

Project Descriptions: Why are some interracial relationships more likely to occur than others? In this study, we’re interested in learning about how individuals perceive and use race as cue for romantic relationships. Research assistants will work with interpreting data collected and developing research plans to move forward.

Duties & Time Commitment: As a research assistant, you will help with data collection, coding and managing data. A minimum commitment of 8-10 hours/week for at least one quarter (Fall 2019) is required.

Qualifications and Skills: Ideal candidates will have a strong interest in social psychology. They will also be friendly, reliable, and highly motivated. Previous experience in social psychology courses are preferred but not required.

Compensation: Research assistants can be hired for work study, course credit (Psych 195), or volunteer. One unit will correspond to 3 hours of work per week.

To Apply: Please send your resume/CV (including class standing), transcript, and brief statement of interest to sakaria4@stanford.edu
